MATLAB vs R | Learn The Top 7 Important Differences The main difference between Scilab and Matlab function is that they do not use the same input values to build an Hankel matrix. If in Matlab, you just have to give a column vector (and eventually a row vector), Scilab function requires the size of the Hankel matrix to build and a covariance sequence vector for this matrix. hankel (Matlab function) - Hankel matrix - Scilab Difference order, specified as a positive integer scalar or []. The default value of n is 1.. It is possible to specify n sufficiently large so that dim reduces to a single (size(X,dim) = 1) dimension. When this happens,
