Knowledge of clinically and cost-effective wound management is an obvious requirement for surgeons, yet wound care education rarely features within the medical curriculum. As a result surgical trainees are often poorly placed to join in multidisciplinary wound management and may feel threatened when asked to manage wound complications. A vast range of dressing products exists yet robust evidence of the function and effectiveness of individual products is often lacking. Wound dressings: principles and practice - ScienceDirect The guiding principles of wound care have always been focused around defining the wound, identifying any associated factors that may influence the healing process, then selecting the appropriate wound dressing or treatment device to meet the aim and aid the Wound Care: A Guide to Practice for Healthcare Professionals TNPT has been found to improve wound healing; to stabilize the wound and assist wound contracture, to stimulate angiogenesis and to remove wound exudate and decrease peri-wound oedema. In its simplest form localized negative pressure is applied to a closed foam or gauze-based wound dressing fitted to a cavity wound sealed under a film dressing.
